Sunhillo Corporation Announces New Name for its Core Software Suite

Sunhillo to Change Name of its Common Software Platform to SureLine™

West Berlin, NJ, October 10, 2017 – Sunhillo Corporation today announced that the software suite that powers their Real-Time Interface and Conversion (RICI), Longport, Margate II ADS-B, Ventnor, and Surveillance Gateway Processor (SGP) series products has a new name, SureLine™. Outside of the name change, the SureLine™ software is the same as what has been historically called “COTS.” The software suite continues to provide the extensive feature-set, high-level performance, and full access to each product's respective hardware interfaces that its customers have come to expect from Sunhillo.

“The new name will help our customers more easily reference our industry leading unified software platform,” says David P. Whitman, President and CEO of Sunhillo. “We believe the new SureLine name gives our software the branding that it deserves and better reflect its ability to work across a range of hardware products.”

The company plans to roll out usage of the SureLine™ branding throughout the month of October, with a wide release planned for November.
